Mayo Clinic Minute

Toss the junk food for better health

| Video                                     | Audio   |
|---|---|
|   | French fries, pizza, potato chips, and sweets   |
| Kate ZeratskyDietitianMayo Clinic | " with their added salt, added fat and sugar are tasty."  |
|   | Mayo Clinic dietitian Kate Zeratsky says these highlyprocessed foods are often stripped of theirnutritional value even though they taste so good tomany of us."We like taste and convenience, and |
|   | those foods generally fit that bill."   |
|   | And we are creatures of habit.  |
|   | The good news is habits can be broken.  |
|   | "Changing a habit or a behavior is a challenge and sohaving a plan as you go about that change probably willbe helpful."  |
|   | One option is removing the temptation.  |
|   | "Instead of having those foods on your kitchen counter,maybe putting out a bowl of fruit."  |
|   | Try gradually cutting back, and pairing it with a new food.   |
|   | "It might be pairing that ice cream with some cut-up fruit."  |
|   | And option three. Replace that sweet candy or cookie with a piece of fresh fruit.   |
|   | "It gives you freedom and some permission to findout what works without feeling like it's such a toughtask."  |
|   | For the Mayo Clinic News Network, I'm Jason Howland.  |